Lake Louise and Victoria Glacier. Lake Louise, situated at an elevation of 5,645 feet and shut in on every side by rocky, snow-capped peaks, is reached from Laggan Station by a drive two and a half miles upward through a spruce forest. Here, at the very edge of the water, the Canadian Pacific Railway built a charming chalet, which has since been enlarged to a great mountain hostelry. Beyond the lake and behind the mountains appear Mount Victoria and its glaciers.
